Honoring Your Service

Connecting Veterans with Disabilities to Potential Employers

As a veteran, you have a strong commitment to duty and specialized skills that give you a distinct competitive advantage in today's job market. At SourceAmerica®, we believe in honoring the military service of our nation's veterans, and we are committed to helping you utilize your unique abilities to find meaningful career opportunities.

For more than 40 years, SourceAmerica has connected people with disabilities with employment opportunities in the federal government, and more recently, in the private sector. This commitment extends to veterans. Our national network of more than 750 nonprofit agencies can help you transfer your military skills to other fields and provide you with training and assistive technology.

Providing Ongoing Assistance to Veterans in the Workforce

In partnership with the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, wounded warriors programs and our nationwide network of nonprofits, SourceAmerica offers training, job search assistance and career counseling to veterans with disabilities in the workforce. Our commitment doesn't stop there. Even after we connect you to potential employers, we do everything we can to help you succeed on the job. We are strong advocates for assistive technologies as a way to improve access to employment, and our nonprofits continuously improve employer best practices so veterans have enhanced vocational opportunities, higher wages and increased upward mobility.

As of August 2017, 370,000 veterans were unemployed. That's 3.7% of the labor force.

“This job has given me a real sense of accomplishment by providing me a chance to take care of others again like I did in the Army. I’m not just sitting around the house feeling sorry for myself. I hope other disabled vets will hear my story and see what’s possible.”

– Jeff Carver, Deputy Program Director, InspiriTec/DMDC

“I seriously damaged my left leg [in Iraq]...for a two-year period I was out of work...firms were very hesitant to hire me because of my disabilities. It’s been great to find an organization that allows me to relearn.”
